EMERGENCY ASSISTANCE

If you have been abused or are afraid of being hurt...

Get to a safe place. Your first priority is the safety of yourself and your children. Leave the house if necessary; go to a shelter or to a friend or neighbour.

Go to a hospital, clinic, or your doctor to get medical attention if you have been injured.

Call the police. Tell them you have been assaulted. Provide details and write down the incident number, the officers' names and badge numbers.

Prologue

Beginning the Transition

If you are — or were — in an abusive relationship and are trying to make your life better, this handbook is for you.

You are not alone. Domestic violence happens in all types of families all over the world. In Canada, it is estimated that one out of every four women is abused by her partner. That means that in Brantford and Brant County, as many as 14,000 women are victims of domestic violence. However, because of the isolation, embarrassment and fear that usually goes along with abuse, it's normal to believe you are alone and to be overwhelmed by the thought of leaving the relationship: "Where would I go; how would I cope, how could I provide for my children?" They may feel their situation is hopeless.

But it isn't. There is hope and there is help, right here in Brantford and the County of Brant. The Refrigerator Door is a start. In the same way that the fridge is often the gathering place for notes, lists, reminders and other important items, this publication provides easy-to-find information that can help you as you work toward establishing a violence free life for yourself and your children.

We recognize that while most survivors of abuse share common feelings and fears, everyone's situation is unique. There is information and advice for those who are contemplating changes, for those in the midst of leaving relationships, and for those coping with the aftermath of their decisions.

This handbook includes the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of various organizations that can assist with many of your practical and emotional needs. It also includes space for you to record your own notes and to add the names and phone numbers of other people and agencies that will become part of your support network. Just like the unique collage of pictures and papers on your own fridge door, this book is meant to be a personal resource that can help you through this critical stage in your life.

One word of advice: At times, seeking help can seem like a difficult and frustrating process. Staff come and go. Programs and services change. New laws and policies replace old ones. And sometimes you need to call several times to get through to the right person or department. Don't give up. This may be one of the most important things you can do for yourself.

If you have any questions or comments, or you want additional copies of this handbook, please contact Nova Vita Domestic Violence Prevention Services, 519-752-1005. Additional copies can be downloaded from our website, www.novavita.org.

What is Abuse?

If you are being abused...

- You are not alone.
- You are not to blame.
- You have the right to be safe.
- You can get help.

Brantford is #2 in Ontario and #7 in all of Canada for police-reported domestic violence (Statistics Canada, 2014)

While B.R.A.V.E does not condone violence against anyone, the committee recognized that domestic violence and/or sexual violence disproportionately affects women. Aboriginal women, women of colour, women with disabilities and transgendered individuals face even higher rates.

Abuse is an attempt to have power and control over another person by hurting or mistreating them.

Types of Abuse

Physical: some examples are hitting, punching, beating, slapping, pulling hair, use of weapons, mutilation, burning, biting, murder

Sexual: any sexual contact that you do not consent to, ranging from unwanted touching to harassment to rape (see also page 15-18)

Verbal: threats, insults, name-calling, blaming and accusing, swearing, shouting

Psychological/Emotional: withholding love, sympathy or understanding, inadequate physical or emotional care, isolation, intimidation, extreme jealousy, destroying property, threatening to commit suicide

Financial: taking money or pay cheques without permission, withholding money and/or denying access to employment opportunities, preventing access to household financial information

Spiritual: making fun of a person's spiritual beliefs or preventing them from attending the church, synagogue or temple of their choice

Cultural: preventing you from participating in cultural activities, traditional teachings and ceremonies, or forcing you to change your culture. Your partner refuses to sign Certificate of Indian Status or Band Registration for the children.

Signs of an Abusive Relationship

If your partner uses physical force to hurt, scare, or control you, even if just occasionally, the relationship is an abusive one.

Physical and sexual assault are against the law. No one — including your partner — has the right to hurt you or to force you to perform sexual acts against your will.

It is also a crime to make death threats.

There are also many other behaviours that signal an abusive relationship. These behaviours may not be against the law, but they can cause serious emotional/psychological harm and have a devastating effect on a person's self-esteem.

Your relationship may be abusive if...

- You are afraid to express your true feelings or tell your partner about your own needs and ambitions.
- You are kept away from, or are discouraged from seeing, family and friends.
- You are accused of cheating, even when you have done nothing wrong.
- You have to account for your whereabouts at all times.
- You are almost always tense and worried about how your partner will react.
- You feel responsible for making your partner happy and always take the blame when things go wrong.
- You are often making excuses or lying to family, friends, and co-workers to hide the situation at home.
- You are constantly being criticized by your partner and feel you can never do anything right.
- You are told you are “crazy” or “too sensitive” when you try to talk about your concerns.

What is Abuse?

Strangulation assaults

Strangulation is one of the most lethal forms of violence. Strangulation is a form of asphyxia (lack of oxygen) to the brain when blood vessels and air passages are closed as a result of pressure being applied to the neck. Strangulation can make you become unconscious within about 10 seconds and death may occur within 4-5 minutes.

The act of strangulation symbolizes an abuser's power and control over the victim. The victim is completely overwhelmed by the abuser: she struggles for air, and is at the mercy of the abuser for her life. A single experience of strangulation or the threat of it may cause so much fear that the victim can get trapped in a pattern of control by the abuser and be made vulnerable to further abuse.

Up to 68% of women victims of domestic violence have

- You feel trapped and are unhappy in your relationship most of the time.

Abusers often use threats to keep their partners in a constant state of anxiety and fear, and to maintain power and control over them.

If your partner is abusive, they may threaten to hurt you, the children, or your pets. They may also threaten to leave you, to take the children away, or to report you to the authorities if you don't do what they say. Some abusers will threaten to commit suicide if their partners leave them.

If you are being abused...

You are not alone.

Millions of individuals are abused by their partners each year.

You are not to blame.

You are not responsible for your partner's actions and you cannot change their behaviour.

You have a right to be safe.

You deserve to be respected and to live a violence free life.

You can get help.

There are many good programs and services in the community, starting with Nova Vita's 24-hour Crisis Line, 519-752-HELP.

Facts about Domestic Violence and Abuse

There are many names for the violence that occurs in intimate relationships: domestic violence, intimate partner violence, wife beating, partner abuse, battering, wife assault, family violence, and woman abuse. They are just different phrases to express the same thing — a relationship where one person uses physical violence, threats, intimidation and fear to have power and control over another person.

Domestic abuse has long been considered a “family secret,” making it difficult to assess the true nature of the problem and provide help to the victims. Today, more people are aware of the issue although there are still many myths and misconceptions.

The following are some facts...

Violence within families is not a new problem.

It has been happening throughout the centuries and in countries all over the world — including Canada — where it was accepted that the man was the “head of the household” and therefore could treat his wife and children however he liked, even if it represented a misuse of power. It is only in recent years that attitudes and laws changed and women were no longer considered the “property” of their husbands.

In Canada, laws were passed in the late 1960s making it illegal for a man to assault his wife and stating that physical and mental cruelty were grounds for divorce. Now, the judicial system takes the problem of domestic violence seriously. If there is evidence of assault, the police will lay charges. Sentences for convicted perpetrators can include time in jail.

Abuse occurs in all types of families and relationships.

Domestic violence is a widespread problem. Studies indicate as many as 33% of Canadian women experience intimate partner violence in their lifetime and at least one out of four Canadian women have been physically assaulted by a spouse. Current rates estimate approximately 20% of domestic violence victims are men.

Domestic abuse is not just a problem common to lower income households or select ethnic groups. Abuse occurs in relationships and homes of all socioeconomic, racial, religious and cultural backgrounds. It affects women and men of all ages and may be present in intimate relationships of all types — from couples who have just started dating to long-time marriages, and everything in between.

What is Abuse?

experienced at least one strangulation assault by a male partner during their lifetime.

Strangulation can cause major health problems. The higher number of strangulation attempts experienced, the more health problems experienced by victims.

As compared to other forms of physical violence, strangulation often leaves no marks or any other signs on the skin.

In 88% of individuals who were assaulted, strangulation was not the only type of abuse experienced (physical, verbal, sexual) in the same incident.

The Sexual Assault/Domestic Violence Nurses at the Brantford General are trained in documenting and getting appropriate treatment for you, if strangulation/choking has been part of the assault.

What is Abuse?

Domestic violence is the leading cause of injury to women between the ages of 15 and 45.

No one ever deserves to be assaulted or emotionally abused.

The majority of domestic abuse victims are women.

Statistics show that the majority of charges involving domestic assault in Ontario are laid against men. Women suffer more frequent and extreme incidents of violence than men and are more likely to sustain serious or life-threatening injuries.

Alcohol and drugs do not cause domestic violence.

Alcohol and drugs are significant factors in domestic abuse incidents and victims are more likely to be seriously injured or killed when alcohol or drugs are used.

Some people believe men assault because they are under a lot of stress, have volatile personalities, or are mentally ill. Abusers are not generally known to be violent with other people (e.g. their bosses, co-workers, friends and neighbours) and are usually able to control their behaviour and deal with stress appropriately. In their intimate relationships, however, they feel free to behave abusively without worrying about any consequences.

Men who are physically violent often hurt their victims in ways that ensure the bruises and cuts won't be obvious to others. Mentally ill people generally wouldn't be capable of such careful, selective violence.

The underlying cause of domestic violence is the perpetrator's desire for power and control.

Victims do not cause the violence by provoking their abusers.

Most abusers do not accept responsibility for their actions. Instead, they lay blame on their victims: "They made me do it" or "They pushed my buttons." A wide range of events that trigger assaults have been reported, some of them as trivial as "buttering the bread the wrong way."

If you are being abused, it is not your fault. It is your partner who has the problem and who needs help from professionals.

Domestic violence rarely “goes away” on its own.

It is unusual for abusers to stop their violent and controlling behaviour on their own, without some type of counselling or intervention. No matter how hard other members of the family try to please and placate the abuser, there is inevitably an “explosion” of some sort. This is when the physical and sexual abuse, or severe instances of verbal and emotional abuse, happens.

The explosion is one of the three main stages in the “cycle” that takes place in most abusive relationships. It is preceded by a “tension-building” stage that can last for days, weeks or even months before the violent episode occurs. After it does, there is usually a “honeymoon” stage, during which the abuser apologizes for his actions and may be very loving and attentive. During this stage it is easy to believe your partner’s promises to change and to hope that everything will be alright.

However, unless there is some form of intervention, the cycle usually repeats itself with the “explosions” becoming more frequent and increasingly more violent.

Violence in Dating Relationships

Abuse is not just something that occurs between married couples or people who have been together for a long time. Abusive and controlling behaviour can be detected at the outset of a new relationship, sometimes as early as the first date.

Are you going out with someone who...

1. Is jealous and possessive towards you — doesn’t want you to spend time with your friends, checks up on you, won’t accept breaking up or not seeing them all the time.
2. Is bossy — tries to control who you see and what you do, criticizes what you wear, wants to make all the decisions, gives orders, doesn’t take your opinions seriously.
3. Is scary — makes you worry about how they will react to

What is Abuse?

If you are involved with someone who makes you feel uneasy — even if you can’t explain why — trust your instincts and put your safety first.

The rate of dating violence was over 60% higher than the rate of spousal violence in 2011.

What is Abuse?

Women are most at risk of stalking and assaultive behaviour during the first several months after leaving an abusive relationship.

Don't ignore or deny the danger. Take steps to provide for your safety and the safety of your children.

what you say and do, threatens you.

4. Is violent — has a history of fighting with parents, siblings, friends, has a bad temper, brags about mistreating others, owns or uses weapons.
5. Pressures you for sex — thinks women are sex objects, tries to manipulate you or make you feel guilty (“if you really loved me you would...”), moves the relationship along too quickly.
6. Blames you when they treat you badly — says you made them do it.
7. Has a history of bad relationships and blames everyone else for their problems.
8. Abuses drugs or alcohol; may pressure you to do the same.
9. Believes men should be in control and powerful and that women should be passive and submissive.
10. Has caused your friends and family to be concerned for your safety and to warn you about them.

These are some early warning signs of abuse and should not be ignored. If you answered “Yes” to one or more of the questions, your relationship may be an unhealthy one with the potential to become violent.

Speak to a counsellor or someone you trust. You can call Nova Vita Domestic Violence Prevention Services' Crisis Line (519-752-HELP) any time of the day or night to talk to someone who understands and who can help. You don't have to feel embarrassed or ashamed. Asking for help may be the first step in making your life better.

The Sexual Assault/Domestic Violence Care Team at the Brantford General (a team of skilled nurses available 24/7 accessed through the emergency department, will respond promptly) can offer you comprehensive, confidential care if you have been abused by your present partner, past partner, present or past boyfriend/girlfriend. Identify to the triage nurse that you are there because of domestic violence and they can activate the team. Options for care: Emotional support, Forensic documentation and photos of the injuries you are presenting with, safety planning, and discharge to a safe environment. Follow up appointment within 48-72 hours to re-document injuries, further safety planning, support, and referrals to community agencies. Because you are presenting with injuries a physician will assess and medically clear you before discharge. You have the choice of immediate police involvement or have all documentation stored until if or when you are ready to involve police. At times this may take several visits until you are ready to involve police but your history of events has been stored safely. Involvement of police at any point is your choice to make. Your trust and confidentiality is important to us.

Criminal Harassment

Criminal Harassment, also called stalking, involves a range of behaviours that cause the victim to fear for his or her own safety or the safety of loved ones. Criminal Harassment is a type of abuse in which the stalker is trying to control someone by scaring or intimidating them.

Stalking involves a pattern of behaviours that may include...

- following a person, their children, or others they care about
- showing up uninvited at someone's home or workplace
- making repetitive or threatening telephone calls
- sending unwelcome letters, e-mail messages, or gifts
- vandalizing or breaking into someone's home or car
- damaging property
- stealing mail; trying to get personal/confidential information
- threatening someone, or their family, friends or colleagues

Stalkers are usually known to their victims; they are often ex-spouses or partners. Women who leave abusive relationships are particularly at risk for being criminally

What is Abuse?

“Caller ID spoofing” is a common practice used by high-tech cyber stalkers to program the Caller ID to reveal any name and number of their choice. Stalkers often use telephone numbers known by the victim in order to trick and deceive an unsuspecting victim in to answering the phone. Screen your phone calls. By allowing the answering machine to pick up, the stalker may leave a message, which could later be used as evidence.

harassed. It is important not to ignore or deny the harassment; stalking can and often does get worse.

If you are being stalked...

Avoid all contact with the stalker. Once you have made it clear that you do not want to see this person, do not respond to any further calls or messages.

Tell people (friends, family, co-workers) what is happening and emphasize the importance of keeping your phone number, address and other personal information confidential.

Report the harassment to the police. They will assess the risk to you and give you advice on how to plan for your safety. If they feel it is warranted, they will lay charges against the stalker.

Record every stalking instance, including the date, time, details and witnesses, if any. Keep everything the stalker sends; try to record phone messages.

Criminal Harassment is against the law. You have the right to be safe. If charges are laid, the case will be heard in court and the stalker may be found guilty.

Cyber Stalking

Cyberstalk means to engage in a course of conduct to communicate, or cause to be communicated, words, images or language by or through the use of electronic mail or electronic communication, directed at a specific person, causing substantial emotional distress to that person and serving no legitimate purpose. Like stalking (see above), cyberstalking involves a similar pattern of behaviours. You should also track all incidences of cyberstalking in a journal as well.

If you think you are being cyberstalked or harassed, TRUST YOUR INSTINCTS AND PLAN FOR SAFETY:

- Take all threats seriously whether they are verbal or text
- Be wary of relying on Caller ID – see sidebar
- Password protect ALL accounts, including utilities. Request to have the utility/store/agency contact you if there are any changes made to your accounts. You will know if you have made them.
- Change your passwords and PIN numbers
- Notify family, friends and co-workers not to divulge personal information about you to any third party.
- Use a safer computer such as a public computer at a library or the computer of a trusted family member to access your email and use the Internet. If you are concerned about spyware on your device, have your computer or device checked for spyware or remote log-in software.

Social Networking

Stalkers and abusers sometimes use social networking sites to impersonate, stalk, and harass victims. Using safety measures may help reduce risk.

- Adjust privacy and location settings via the website AND your smart phone applications.
- Revisit privacy settings weekly as these features are updated regularly (i.e. Facebook).
- Consider creating a new profile using non-identifying information and an image such as a flower, a sports team logo or other image as your profile picture.

Sexual Assault

Sexual assault is any unwanted act of a sexual nature imposed by one person upon another. Forced or coerced intercourse, grabbing, touching or kissing can be defined as sexual assault. Like other forms of abuse, sexual assault is an act of violence and a vicious attempt to exert power and control over someone.

Some facts...

- One in four Canadian women will be sexually assaulted in her lifetime.
- Sexual assault can happen to anyone. Women of all ages and representing all backgrounds (economic, social, ethnic, religious, cultural etc.) are assaulted.
- Over 80% of sexual assaults are committed by someone known to the victim (e.g. her husband, partner, date, family member, neighbour).
- At least 80% of attacks occur in a private home.

Nothing you do gives anyone the right to assault you. It doesn't matter what you wear, who you are with or where you go. Even if you have consented to sexual activity with someone previously, you have the right to say no to something you don't want to do. If sexual activity took place while you were asleep or unconscious; or if the person you were with was in a position of authority over you - you were sexually assaulted. Sexual assault is a crime, even if the perpetrator is your partner. If you are a victim of sexual assault you can get help:

The Sexual Assault/Domestic Violence Care Team at the Brantford General Hospital (a team of skilled nurses are available 24/7 accessed through the emergency department, will respond promptly) can offer you many confidential care and treatment options; 1) Emotional Support: you are given the opportunity to discuss what has happened to you with someone who is supportive and understanding and will respect your choices of care. 2) Medical examination: you are given emotional support plus a physical examination to assess for any injuries and testing and treatment for sexually transmitted diseases, Hepatitis B and HIV. The Morning After Pill is also available. 3) Collection of forensic evidence can be completed during the course of the physical exam, if you wish. If forensic evidence is collected you have the choice to involve police immediately or have the evidence stored for up to 6 months in case you decide to report the incident to the police. Follow up counselling and medical treatment is part of all three treatment options.

Call the police if you need protection or want to report the assault.

Get the support and comfort you need by calling a trusted friend or family member. You can call the Sexual Assault Centre of Brant 24 hours a day at 519-751-3471. The crisis line is available to survivors of sexual violence, and to their friends/family members. The Sexual Assault Centre can help you by: providing individual counselling and support groups, having someone accompany you to the hospital, police station, or court; advocating on your behalf with the police and hospital; and providing information about other local services you may want to access.

Remember, the assault was not your fault. You are not responsible for the actions of your abuser.

Sexual Harassment

Sexual harassment is any type of unwelcome sexual talk or action that makes you feel uncomfortable, upset, embarrassed, trapped, or confused.

Examples include:

- suggestive or lewd comments
- leering
- insulting remarks, name calling
- spreading rumours
- repeated requests for dates or sexual favours
- grabbing, touching, and other unwanted attention

What is Abuse?

Sexual Harassment violates the Ontario Human Rights Code.

Bill 168- requires employers who are aware, or who ought reasonably to be aware, that domestic violence may occur in the workplace to take every precaution reasonable in the circumstances to protect a worker who is at risk of physical harm.

You can file a complaint with the Ontario Human Rights Commission.

For more information call

What is Abuse?

Sexual harassment is hurtful. No one has the right to harass anyone else. You deserve to feel safe and to be treated with respect at home, in public, at work and at school.

If you have been sexually harassed...

Don't minimize it. Trust your own feelings. If someone is flirting or engaging in good natured teasing, it is usually enjoyable and makes people feel positive. Sexual harassment, however, makes the victim feel uneasy, degraded, humiliated or helpless.

Don't ignore it. If left alone, the harassment can get worse. The harasser may begin to engage in even more abusive behaviour such as stalking, threats or assault.

Confront the harasser if it is possible and safe to do so. Be clear and direct and insist that the behaviour stop immediately.

Decide whether you want to report it. Workplaces and schools take sexual harassment very seriously and have policies in place to protect people and deal with this behaviour. You should not be ashamed to make a complaint about the harassment; it was not your fault. Speak to someone who can help you such as your employer, supervisor, manager, teacher, principal, or other person in authority.

Keep track of the harassment. Make notes on each incident, including the date, time, place, specific behaviour and any witnesses. This will be useful if you make a formal complaint at work or school, or if you need to involve the police.

Talk to someone you trust. You may want to speak with an understanding friend or a trained counsellor about your feelings.

Domestic Violence and Children

Protecting Your Children

All parents know that the safety, security and well-being of their children are their main priorities. For women living in fear for their own safety, guarding and protecting their children can be a tremendously difficult task. And yet, it is these children who are most in need of protection. Studies show that children are present in 85% of all domestic violence incidents, and that approximately 43% of the men who regularly assaulted their wives also abused their children.

If your children are being physically abused — or if you know of, or suspect, sexual abuse — it is your responsibility to report the abuse and to do whatever is necessary to provide your children with a safe and healthy environment.

Child abuse is against the law. It is highly destructive - both physically and emotionally, and often affects children for the remainder of their lives.

You can call the Brant Family and Children's Services to get help in protecting your children from the abuser. Caseworkers at the FACS will work with you to develop a plan that will protect your children. You can also contact other organizations in the community for advice and support such as Nova Vita Domestic Violence Prevention Services' 24-hour Crisis Line, 519-752-HELP or St. Leonard's 24-hour Crisis Response Service, 519-759-7188 or 1-866-811-7188.

You might be frightened, confused, and unsure of what you are going to do in the days and weeks ahead, but your children still depend on you and need you to do what is best for them.

Domestic Violence and Children

Children in abusive households need lots of love, reassurance and positive attention. They need to be told that they are not to blame for what is happening.

It is vitally important that you act promptly to stop abuse from occurring or escalating. Don't hesitate to ask for help in keeping your children safe and secure.

The Impact on Children from Witnessing Abuse

Even if children are not being hit or sexually abused themselves, they are deeply affected by abuse in the home. They may feel a range of emotions: fear, anger, confusion. Some children will try their best to be "good", in order to keep peace in the home. Others might act out more, sometimes out of frustration, or as a way to focus the abuser's attention on themselves and away from their mother.

Children are present in about 85% of all domestic violence incidents. They often show symptoms similar to children who are themselves being abused. They may, for example, exhibit some or all of the following:

- stomach-aches, headaches, and other physical problems
- excessive separation anxieties/whining, clinging (younger kids)
- eating disorders (e.g. overeating, undereating, or hoarding food)
- aggressive behaviour, poor social skills
- insecurity and distrust
- poor school attendance and difficulty with school work
- clumsiness, prone to accidents, self-harming
- depression and suicidal feelings
- tendency to get into serious dating relationships or to leave home too early (for adolescents 13 years and over)

Children and teens who see their parents being assaulted may believe they are to blame for the violence. They tend to have significantly more behavioural and emotional problems than children and teens from non-violent homes. Perhaps the most worrisome aspect of domestic abuse is the way it can go on to affect the next generations. Children learn what they see and will usually repeat the behaviours themselves.

Boys who witness violence against their mothers are much more likely to become abusive as adults, while girls are more likely to become victims of abuse.

Children Exposed to Domestic Violence Program

There is help for children who have witnessed abuse in the home. The Children Exposed to Domestic Violence Program is designed to help children aged 6 to 16, and their mothers, deal with the trauma of domestic abuse.

The children meet in small groups where they are encouraged to express their feelings about violence and separation. They are given a chance to understand the abuse of power they have witnessed, and that the violence is not their fault, or the fault of their mother. The children learn positive ways of expressing their feelings and dealing with anger. They also learn how to keep themselves safe at home, in their community, and on the Internet. Concurrently, the mothers meet separately for support and to learn how to help their children heal. A goal of the program is to break the intergenerational cycle of violence.

Participation in the program is free. For more information or to book an intake appointment, call 519-752-1005, ext. 221.

See page 67 for information about other counselling programs for children.

First Steps to a Violence Free Life

Women attempt to leave abusive relationships an average of seven times before ending the relationship permanently.

You are not alone. Help is available.

As a landed immigrant or permanent resident, you cannot be deported from Canada for leaving your partner or for reporting abuse, even if it was your partner who sponsored you.

If you were sponsored by your partner, but don't have permanent resident status at the time you leave the relationship, you can still apply for permanent residence status on "humanitarian or compassionate" grounds.

Stay or Go? Making the Decision

The decision to leave any relationship — particularly if you have been together for some time or have children — is usually a painful one, even if the relationship has been abusive. Ultimately, the decision to stay or leave is yours, no matter how much others may try to persuade you one way or the other.

Some people may not understand why anyone would stay in — or return to — a violent or abusive relationship, and might conclude that the victims somehow like being hurt. These people don't realize that there are many factors at play: an individual may stay out of fear of what might happen if they try to leave. They might be worried about breaking up the family or concerned about how they can support themselves and their children. They may be pressured by other family members to stay. Finally, they might still be hopeful that the relationship will improve.

If you are considering leaving an abusive relationship, you may be grappling with many worries:

- lack of money and/or job skills
- concern about making ends meet and providing for the kids
- difficulty finding good, affordable accommodation
- intimidated by the responsibility of running a household alone
- feeling guilty about taking the children away from their other parent
- reluctance to leave the home and/or give up your current lifestyle

- embarrassment about what family, friends, neighbours or co-workers will think
- fear of being alone
- fear of what your partner will do

You may have several other concerns, depending on your situation. It is normal to feel uncertain and frightened. Your self-esteem may be at an all-time low, particularly if you have been made to feel incompetent and incapable of handling anything by yourself. At the same time, you may still love your partner, and believe that you can do something to stop the abuse.

Whether you decide to stay in the relationship or to leave, keep in mind...

You deserve to live a life free from violence and abuse. You do not have to answer to anyone else and you do not have to defend your actions, particularly, to people who do not understand what you have been living with. You do not have to feel guilty or ashamed about ending the relationship; you are not the one committing the crime.

You have the capacity to be strong and capable. Contrary to what you may have been told, you can do things for yourself. You have probably had to develop certain techniques and skills in order to survive in your relationship. You can learn new skills to help you if you plan to live independently.

Support and help is available. This handbook lists several organizations in the community that can assist with a wide range of needs including housing, financial, employment, parenting, counselling, and more.

Your children may be at even greater risk if you stay. Men who assault their wives often abuse their children as well. Even if they are not being physically hurt, children suffer tremendous emotional trauma by witnessing abuse (see pages 20-21).

Things to take with you when you leave...

- driver's licence and registration
- passports, birth certificates, (yours and your children's)
- Social Insurance card
- Ontario Works identification
- immigration papers, work permits
- Certificate of Indian Status for you and your children
- medications
- school and vaccination records
- marriage certificate, separation agreement, divorce papers
- custody papers
- court orders, peace bonds
- bank books or statements, cheque book
- house deed or lease agreement
- insurance papers

There is also a strong chance they will grow up to repeat the behaviours they have learned.

You cannot change your partner's behaviour. You are not responsible for their actions and you cannot control them. Your partner may be sorry for hurting you and promise to change. But eventually the abuse begins again.

People can change their violent behaviour, but they usually need professional help. Challenge to Change, for example (see pages 70-71), provides therapeutic counselling for abusive men.

Many abusers, however, won't admit they have a problem and will not seek help. Even if they do, it will involve changing behaviours and beliefs they have had for a long time. That does not happen easily or quickly. You need to decide what is best for you and your children both in the short and long term.

Whether you decide to leave or to stay in the relationship, or if you think you will eventually leave, but are not ready to do so yet, you should create a "safety plan". This will help you prepare for an emergency, and provide an escape plan for you and your children in case you are at risk of serious harm at the hands of your partner. You can use the suggestions on the following pages to create a personalized plan.

Your Safety Plan

While you are still living with your partner, be ready in case you need to escape in a hurry...

- Collect and hide important documents (or copies) that you will need if you leave home (see the list in the margins).
- Have ready: access to house and car keys, bank and credit cards, health cards, emergency money, and important telephone numbers.
- Pack a small "emergency" suitcase with some clothes and necessities for yourself and the children. Keep the suitcase hidden, but accessible.

- Consider keeping extra clothing, money, keys, etc. at a friend's or neighbour's home.
- Plan how you would leave the house in an emergency. Practice the steps.
- Know the telephone numbers and addresses of the local shelter and other places you can go (e.g. friends, family members)

Meanwhile, try to make your environment as safe as possible and prepare for any event...

- Don't keep the abuse secret. Tell neighbours, friends, family members and/or co-workers who you can trust.
- Come up with a code word and give it to trusted friends, neighbours etc.; instruct them to call the police if you use that word.
- If they are old enough to understand, tell your children the code word. Teach them who to go to for help and how to call 911.
- If you sense a confrontation, try to move to areas in the home with an easy exit. Avoid being "trapped" in rooms like the kitchen, bathroom, or where there are objects that can be used as weapons.
- Save as much money as you can. Open a bank account in your own name; be sure that account statements are not mailed to your home.
- Prepare for the possibility of being on your own: learn about supports in the community, update your resume, acquire additional job skills.
- Try to stay healthy and strong. Eat properly, exercise, get enough sleep and do things that help you relax. Don't succumb to drugs and alcohol to cope with the stress. They will drain your energy and make it impossible for you to think clearly.

First Steps to a Violence Free Life

- recent income tax returns (yours and your partner's)
- health cards (yours and your children's)
- credit and bank cards
- emergency cash
- personal address/telephone book
- extra clothes, personal items
- children's items: diapers, bottles/feeding dishes, clothes, blankets, or favourite toys
- valuable jewellery
- cell phone and charger
- a few items of sentimental value
- It may also be important later to have your partner's SIN number, picture, birth date, work, and financial information.

If you leave the relationship...

- If needed, obtain a protective court order. Keep it with you at all times and give copies to the police and others, as required.
- Change the locks and/or install new doors, security systems, sensors, smoke detectors, and carbon monoxide detectors.
- Tell your landlord, neighbours, friends and co-workers that you are no longer living with your partner; ask them to call the police if they see him near your home or place of work.
- Make sure teachers, daycare workers, babysitters, etc. know who may and may not retrieve your children.
- Teach your children what to do and/or who to call if they are approached by your partner.
- Take extra precautions when travelling to and from your home or workplace. Always park in well-lit areas and when in public, try to stay within sight and earshot of people, in case you need to call for help.
- Be aware of any stalking behaviour by your partner and report any incidents to the police. (See pages 13-15)

Women are most vulnerable in the weeks and months just after they leave abusive relationships. Don't ignore any threatening actions on the part of your partner and don't underestimate the danger you may be in. Be extra careful and take steps to keep yourself and your children safe.

Police Involvement

In an emergency, call 911.

Try to speak as clearly as you can and give your name and address. Tell the dispatcher what is happening (e.g. you are being assaulted or have concerns for your safety), whether there are weapons in the home, and if anyone has been injured.

Reporting Domestic Violence

Although more people are speaking up about domestic violence and there are more options for women seeking help, domestic abuse remains an under-reported crime. Only about 25 percent of all physical and sexual assault cases are ever reported to the police.

One reason is a fear of reprisal: many are afraid that they will suffer even more severe abuse and “punishment” for calling the authorities. They may also be intimidated by the police and the court system, or feel the system doesn’t take them seriously or do enough to protect them.

The police and courts can play a critical role in your safety. They exist to protect victims and they have a duty to respond to your needs and to help you.

Why you should report assault to the police...

That call can save your life. Or it can prevent you from suffering even more severe abuse. Studies reveal that the average domestic abuse victim is assaulted several times before the police are called. For some, help comes too late. On average, every six days a woman in Canada is killed by her partner.

The police can help attend to your immediate needs: ensuring you get to a hospital, making sure you and your children get to a shelter or other place of safety, or connecting you with other supports and services in the community.

The incidents of physical abuse tend to decrease once the police have been involved. When the police lay charges or make an arrest, the chance of physical violence occurring again decreases by as much as half.

The police can enforce any court orders (for example, restraining orders and peace bonds) and charge your partner with violating those orders.

Police records are particularly important if the case goes to court. Police officers can record details about the incident and take pictures of any injuries for evidence in court.

What Happens When You Call the Police

- You need to let the police into your home. If it is a 911 call, the police will enter to ensure that everyone in the home is safe.
- If they witness an assault, or they have “reasonable grounds” to suspect that an assault has taken place, the police are required to lay a charge. Reasonable grounds would include evidence like bruises, cuts, burns, etc., broken or strewn property and other signs of a struggle, or statements from witnesses.
- The police may need to investigate further by collecting additional evidence and getting statements from both the victim and the abuser. Be sure to describe the assault in detail and show them any visible injuries you have suffered (they may take photographs or arrange to have photos taken). Provide information about other violent episodes and show any court orders you have. You will likely be distraught, but try to be as calm and cooperative as possible. The police are there to help you.
- If a charge is laid, the police will arrest the offender and take them into custody. In many cases, your partner will remain in custody for a bail hearing. After the bail hearing, they may remain in custody or be released on a Recognizance of Bail (court order). You need to advise the police where you can be contacted so that they can let you know if your partner is being released.
- If you are worried about your safety, tell the police. Conditions can be placed on your partner’s release. For instance, they may be ordered to live somewhere else and not have any contact with you, either in person or by phone, social media, or third party. If

Although the police and courts will do what they can to protect you, you must still exercise caution and good judgement.

If you believe your partner’s arrest will result in even more violence, gather the children and your “emergency” bags and go to a shelter or other safe place before they are released.

Let the police know how they can reach you so that you can be informed when your partner is released.

Be sure to document all violent episodes and unwanted contact (e.g. text messages, emails, social media, or through third party).

your partner violates the conditions, you must call the police again right away so that further charges can be laid.

- Charges that have been laid by the police cannot be withdrawn or changed, except by a Crown Attorney.
- If you or your children need medical attention, the police can make sure you get to the hospital and/or contact someone from Victim Services to offer assistance and support.
- If the police do not lay charges, ask them why. It is usually because there were “insufficient grounds.” That does not mean that they do not believe you. You can lay charges yourself, although it is a more involved process (see below).
- If no charges are laid, but you don’t feel safe staying at home, you can ask the police to wait while you gather some belongings and ensure you get to a safe place.
- Write down the officers’ names and badge numbers, as well as the “Incident Report Number” in case you need to follow up (you will likely receive a business card).
- If you are not happy with the way you were treated by the police, you can request to speak to the officers’ supervisor or superior.

Other Judicial Action

Laying Charges Yourself

If the police do not lay a charge against your abuser, you can lay one yourself. You need to go to court and talk to a Justice of the Peace. Provide all the necessary details and bring along any witnesses (or their written statements). After you “lay the information,” the Justice of the Peace will conduct a hearing under oath and you will be asked to present your evidence. If your partner is ordered to appear in court to answer the charges, you may be called upon to be a witness. There is no fee to speak with a Justice of the Peace.

Peace Bonds

If you are afraid that your partner will try to hurt you or your children, or destroy your property, you can talk to a Justice of the Peace about getting a peace bond — a written promise that he will “keep the peace and be of good behaviour.” You may also be asked to make the same promise. There might be other conditions as well. A peace bond may be valid for up to 12 months. Always keep a copy with you; if your partner violates it, it is a criminal offence and you must call the police right away. Once a peace bond is issued, it can only be lifted by the courts and as long as it is in effect, all parties must abide by the conditions. Therefore, if one of the conditions is that your partner stay away from the family home, you cannot decide to let them return or visit.

Court Orders

Concerns about safety, custody and access, support and division of property can be dealt with through a court order. You can arrange for a court order by speaking with a lawyer (see page 38). You can also request an order by visiting the Family Court office and picking up the appropriate forms (including a Notice of Motion and an Affidavit). The types of orders you can request include:

- custody of the children
- access to the children
- support for yourself or your children
- restraining order
- property order
- exclusive possession of the matrimonial home

A restraining order may be issued by the court if there is reason to believe that you are at risk of harm at the hands of your spouse/partner. The order may include specific instructions, for example, that your partner must not come to your home, place of work, children’s school, etc. Restraining orders can be permanent, or valid for a certain amount of time (e.g. several months).

The restraining order must be served to your partner, but you do not have to do it yourself. The court, or your lawyer, can assist you with the procedures.

Try to keep a copy of the restraining order with you at all times or at an alternate safe location. Call the police if your spouse or partner breaches the order. They may be arrested and charged.

Know Your Rights!

You have the right to live your life free from violence and abuse.

Spousal assault – including physical attacks, sexual abuse or threats – is a crime. You have the right to call the police and to be protected from your abuser. You have the right, and an obligation, to ensure the safety and well-being of your children.

If you have no means of supporting yourself and your children, you have the right to financial assistance. It is your right to seek help and support from other programs and services in the community.

You and your children also have rights under the Family Law Act which covers custody, support and property.

Matrimonial Property and the Indian Act – please see page 95.

Custody of Children

Unless there are exceptional circumstances, it is vital that you take your children with you when you leave an abusive relationship. If you are forced to leave your children behind, return for them as soon as possible. You can have the police accompany you, if you are worried about your safety.

In cases of emergency, you should apply for Temporary Custody of your children as soon as possible. This will be in effect until a Legal Custody Order is granted by a judge. To get temporary custody and to file for final legal custody, call 519-758-3460 or visit the Court Office at 44 Queen Street in

Information Referral Coordinator

The Information Referral Coordinator can provide you with information regarding Family Court procedures, such as access and support. This is not legal advice. Contact 226-920-8109 for more information.

Office of the Children’s Lawyer

If there is a dispute between parents about custody and access, a judge may call upon the Office of the Children’s Lawyer. When this happens, both parents have to fill out intake forms and the Office will appoint a social worker and/or a lawyer who will represent the child in court and make recommendations based on the child’s preferences and best interests. There is no cost to either parent.

Access Issues

If you have custody of the children, your partner still has a right to see them, unless the court has made an order for no access. That usually happens only when there is strong evidence that the children are at risk of abuse or neglect by the partner. Supervised access — when the children and parents meet in a neutral location — may be ordered in certain cases.

Court Proceedings

- After a charge is laid, the offender has a “first appearance” in court. If they plead guilty, there is no trial but they will be sentenced. If they plead not guilty, a trial date is chosen by the judge.
- It can be several months before the trial takes place. During this time, you may feel intimidated or threatened by your partner. Document any incidents. Call the police if you believe you are in danger.
- You may have to appear in court to give evidence. You can call Nova Vita Domestic Violence Prevention Services (519-752-HELP) or Victim Services of Brant (519-752-3140) for guidance. You do not have to be represented by a lawyer.
- If your partner is found guilty, they can receive one of several sentences depending on the seriousness of the charge and factors such as a history of violence in the relationship and any previous criminal record.
- Whether or not your partner serves time in jail, their sentence may include a term of probation, which could last from six months to three years. The conditions of probation could include the following: no contact directly or indirectly; that they not come within 100 metres of your home or workplace; they report to a probation officer regularly; attend a specific counselling/treatment program; that they not own or possess a weapon; and that they not use alcohol or drugs.
- You have a chance to tell the judge about the effect the violence has had on you and your family by preparing a “victim impact statement.” You can do this with help from the police or Victim Services.
- To get information about the case, you can call the court, the Crown Attorney’s Office or the police officer(s) involved.

Using a Lawyer

If you are leaving your partner, you should consider speaking to a lawyer to find out your rights and your options. It is especially advisable to seek legal advice if you have minor children or if you are not a Canadian citizen.

A lawyer can help you:

- understand your rights under the Family Law Act
- keep you up-to-date about any new legislation or procedures affecting your situation
- write a separation agreement
- arrange for a court order

A court order specifies the terms of agreement between two people who have separated. In putting together your court order a lawyer may ask the judge to grant you:

- custody of your children
- financial support from your partner
- your share of joint property and assets
- exclusive possession of your home

Lawyers are listed in the local telephone book. Ask family and friends to recommend lawyers they have used. Some lawyers offer a free consultation; use this brief meeting to state your expectations and to determine whether you are comfortable with the lawyer's approach. You should also find out about the fees and payment schedule.

You can also get a free 30-minute consultation by calling the Law Society Referral Service at 1-855-947-5255. You will be given the name and telephone number of a lawyer or licensed paralegal in your community. You will also get a referral number which you will have to provide when you call the lawyer or paralegal to make an appointment.

When you meet with your lawyer:

- Be on time; call if you have to cancel or reschedule the appointment.
- Be prepared. Keep a file with all the necessary documents (such as financial information, copies of deeds, proof of income for yourself and your partner, any custody or court orders, etc.). Bring the file each time you meet with your lawyer.
- Bring a list of your questions and write down the answers as you get them. Be sure you understand the information you are given. To keep legal fees to a minimum, you should avoid any unnecessary telephone calls to your lawyer.

If you can't afford a lawyer...

Legal Aid

You may be able to get Legal Aid to pay for a lawyer if you qualify financially and your legal problem is one that Legal Aid covers (family matters, criminal charges, immigration, and refugee matters). People with no income or who are on social assistance almost always qualify financially for Legal Aid, but you may still financially qualify even if you have a job. There is also a legal eligibility requirement that a Duty Counsel can assess.

Call the toll-free Legal Aid number at 1-800-668-8258 as soon as you know you need help. Legal Aid staff will ask questions to help you find the services that best fit your legal issues. Be able to provide relevant financial information including identification (S.I.N. card, driver's license, birth certificate or landed immigrant papers), any documents relating to your case (court orders, separation agreements, etc.), proof of your current income (pay stubs, Ontario Works cheque stubs etc.), and an up-to-date bank book or statements. The staff will help you complete an application and may be able to predict right away whether you are likely to get Legal Aid. They may refer you to a FLIC or a Duty Counsel for further assistance.

Meanwhile, contact Nova Vita Domestic Violence Prevention Services at 519-752-4357 to receive a certificate for two hours of free legal service as well as a current list of local lawyers who accept Legal Aid.

Legal Issues & Judicial System

Mandatory Information

Program - This is a relatively new program to Ontario, designed to inform parties about the separation and/or divorce process and family court. Applicants (the person initiating the case) and Respondents (the other person) both must attend a MIP, however, the sessions are at different times. A Judge is the only person who can exempt you from the MIP, so it is very important that you let your lawyer or the judge know that you are a victim of domestic violence in order to help alleviate any safety concerns you have for yourself and/or your children.

Family Court Support Worker

Nova Vita Domestic Violence Prevention Services' Family Court Support Program supports victims of domestic violence by facilitating their understanding of and passage through the family court system. A Family Court Support Worker provides information about the family court process, helps victims prepare for family court proceedings, refers victims to other specialized services and supports in the community, helps with safety planning, and accompanies the victim to court proceedings, where appropriate. Family court support workers also provide support related to:

- family law
- custody and access
- child and spousal support
- separation and divorce
- child welfare (Family and Children's Services)
- restraining orders

Housing

For women leaving abusive relationships, one of the most important (and usually most challenging) tasks is finding good, affordable accommodation. Since you have to provide a fixed address in order to get help from Ontario Works, your housing needs will be a high priority. The following information can help get you started...

Subsidized Housing

Brantford Housing Department

The Housing Department oversees social housing programs in Brantford and Brant County. The rent in these units is set according to the income of the household (generally 30% of monthly gross income). There are also some market rent units available.

Types of housing available through the Housing Department include detached and semi-detached homes, townhouses and apartment buildings for families, singles and seniors, and some units have been modified for those with physical handicaps. Housing communities are located in Brantford, Paris, St. George, and Burford. There is a long waiting list for housing so it is important to get your completed application in and to make sure your contact information stays up-to-date. You can view the housing projects by looking through the catalogue at the Housing Office or on the website.

To apply for housing, visit or call the Housing Department at 220 Colborne Street, Brantford, 519-759-3330 or visit the website at www.brantford.ca and click on “housing”. The Brant(ford) Access to Housing (BATH) is a quick and easy way to apply to a large number of housing providers at the same time by completing just one application form. You will be placed on a central waiting list according to the date your completed application was received.

Housing

Brantford Native Housing was founded in 1986 and is a non-profit charitable organization whose main objective is to provide safe, secure and affordable rental homes and support services for urban Native Peoples living in the city of Brantford and Brant County. Call or visit the office to obtain a rental application form. For more information, please see page 97-98.

Special Priority for housing is allowed for applicants whose personal safety, or whose family's safety is at risk because of abuse by someone with whom they live or have recently lived with, and, from whom they intend to separate permanently. This may include a sponsor, if the applicant is a sponsored immigrant.

If you think you may qualify for Special Priority status, contact the Housing Department at 519-759-3330, or go to the website at www.brantford.ca and click on “housing,” or contact Nova Vita for a Special Priority information and verification form.

People who are homeless may receive Urgent Priority (one vacancy in every ten). If you think you may qualify for Urgent Priority status, contact the Housing Department.

Brantford Native Housing

Subsidized housing is provided for low income Native families. Housing is available in homes located in Brantford. Call or visit the office to obtain an application form and get further details.

Non-subsidized Housing

If you are not eligible for subsidized housing, or you do not want to wait until a unit becomes available, you can look for accommodation on your own. Homes, apartments, and flats for rent are listed in the classified section of the local newspaper and online through rental websites such as viewit.ca and kijiji.ca. The ads will provide some information – such as the number of bedrooms and the rent – but you will have to call to get more details. Specifically, you need to know...

- the location, address, and type of dwelling
- other details about the layout and room sizes
- amenities provided (e.g. laundry facilities, parking, etc.)
- amenities for children (e.g. playground, nearby park)

- what utilities are included
- if there are any special restrictions or rules
- whether there are any additional fees or charges
- when the home will be available
- whether the unit will be painted/decorated prior to moving day
- what is included (e.g. appliances, window coverings, furniture)

If a house or apartment sounds promising, make an appointment to see it. Try to do this during daylight hours. When you approach the home, look around the neighbourhood: does it seem safe? Are the homes/buildings well kept? Is it relatively quiet? Are the schools nearby? Is it on, or close to, a bus route? Take your time when you inspect the home. Is it clean and in good repair? Does it provide adequate space for your family? Are the appliances in good shape?

If you do not have children or need much space, you might consider boarding with someone or renting a basement apartment/granny suite. Alternatively, you might want to share the space and expenses of a larger apartment or house with a roommate.

You may be restricted by money and/or time, but do your best to find a place where you and your children can be secure and comfortable and where you can feel good about re-building your life.

Signing a Lease

If you are interested in a unit, talk to the landlord about what is required. It is normal to have to pay both the first and last month's rent up front. If you can't afford to do that you may be able to get some assistance from Ontario Works (see page 48) or the Housing Resource Centre. The landlord may also ask you for references or want someone else to co-sign the lease with you, if you are

Housing

It is discriminatory — and illegal — to refuse to rent to someone because: they are pregnant or have children, are on government assistance, have a mental or physical handicap, or because of their marital status, age, gender, sexual orientation, race or nationality.

The Landlord and Tenant Act also states that a tenant may own a pet as long as it isn't a danger, doesn't cause an allergic reaction, and isn't a bother to the other tenants or the landlord.

Housing

unemployed. Once the details have been sorted out, you can arrange to move in.

You may be asked to sign a lease, obligating you to rent the unit for a minimum period (usually a year). If you want to move out before the lease expires, you might have to pay a fee or arrange to sublet the unit to someone else. The lease is a legal contract between you and your landlord. Before signing, make sure it includes...

- the full address of the unit
- a description (number of rooms, size)
- the monthly rent and when it is due
- who collects the rent
- the amount of the deposit
- a breakdown of who pays for which utilities
- items the landlord has agreed to fix

If there is something in the lease you don't understand, get answers before you sign. As a tenant, you have certain rights: to possession on the agreed upon date; to privacy; to good repair; to no more than one rent increase per year; to have visitors; and to not have personal property seized. Your responsibilities are to pay rent when it's due, to act responsibly, and to give written notice when you are ready to move.

If you have any questions or concerns, you can contact the Brant Community Legal Clinic at 519-752-8669 or the Housing Resource Centre.

Housing Resource Centre

The Housing Resource Centre is a free community service providing help to both tenants and landlords. Intake at 519-759-7009 between 8:30 am to 4:15 pm - same day appointments are often available.

Tenants' Services

The Housing Resource Centre helps people (16 and over) find suitable and affordable housing in Brantford and Brant County. You can also contact the centre to get information about the Residential Tenancy Act and other related legislation, or for assistance with a wide range of housing issues such as:

- how to contact landlords
- completing application forms
- advocacy for tenants with housing problems
- how to get utilities hooked up

Brant-Brantford Homelessness Prevention Assistance (BBHPA)

This program helps tenants who are in imminent danger of being evicted or becoming homeless because they are behind in their rent and/or utilities. This program also provides assistance for rental and utility deposits for people who are homeless and are seeking to secure permanent housing. Call 519-759-7009 for more information and eligibility criteria.

- BBHPA funds are means tested, and are provided as a grant or loan depending on income and household size.

The Outreach Program

The Outreach Program helps provide individuals and families who are homeless by helping them access emergency shelters and facilities in the community, assisting with other basic needs, and providing referrals for income, food, permanent housing and other services.

Redirecting Your Mail...

You can purchase a “Change of Address” kit at any Canada Post outlet or online (www.canadapost.ca). You need to fill out a form indicating your new, as well as old, address. Select “self only” so that only mail addressed to you will be redirected. Mail will be forwarded to your new address for three, six, or twelve months with corresponding fees. You will also get change of address cards to send to anyone you wish to have your new address.

Domestic Violence Rent Bank

The Domestic Violence Rent Bank provides loans to women who are leaving an abusive situation to establish a safe and independent residence. To qualify for the bank you must:

- be leaving an abusive situation
- be 16 years or older
- not in receipt of social assistance (if you are, please see your caseworker as you may be eligible for BBHPA)
- be able to repay the loan in 18-24 months
- be able to afford the accommodations

Utilities

Utilities include electricity (hydro), water, heat (i.e. natural gas if it isn't electric heat), telephone, and cable. If you rent, some of the utilities — for example heat, hydro, and electricity — may be included in the rental amount. If any are not, you will have to set up an account with the appropriate utility companies. There is usually a one-time activation/administration fee for new accounts and in some cases, deposits are required. The following are telephone numbers for some of the local utility firms.

Open 8:30 AM - 4:30 PM
Monday through Friday
Tel: 519-759-3330

In order to receive any type of federal or provincial supplement or benefit income, you must have filed an income tax return for the previous year.

If you are unemployed and have no means of supporting yourself and your children, you are entitled to financial assistance. The following provides instruction on how to access some of the main sources. Please note that application procedures change periodically; check with the appropriate service or office.

Ontario Works

Social assistance is provided through Ontario Works. To apply, call the local intake department at 519-759-7009.

You will need to provide:

- personal information including your full name, date of birth, Social Insurance Number, health card number, etc.
- personal information for each of your children
- the address of where you will be living
- the amount you will be paying in rent
- any income you will be receiving
- Assets such as bank accounts, life insurance, etc.

You will be given the date, time, and location of an appointment with a case manager. (If you are in Brantford or Brant County, you will most likely be asked to report to the Brantford office at 220 Colborne Street.)

Assuming you qualify and depending on your rent, the ages of your children and other personal circumstances, you may qualify for approximately...

Single person	$706 per month
Couple	$1065 per month
Couple with 1 child	$1261 per month

You will also receive a drug card, which will cover the cost of some prescription medicine.

Note: You cannot apply to Ontario Works until you know where you will be living.

Brant-Brantford Homelessness Prevention Assistance (BBHPA)

A program developed to help prevent homelessness. It assists with:

- last month's rent deposit
- rent arrears
- heat, hydro, and water arrears

If you are in need of assistance, please contact your Ontario Works case manager, ODSP case worker, or the Housing Resource Centre.

Assistance With Child Care Costs

Child Care Services' Fee Subsidy Program provides financial assistance towards the cost of child care in licensed programs. You might be eligible if you are working, going to school or attending an approved training program. Both full and partial child care subsidies are issued. Call to find out if you qualify for the subsidy and how to proceed.

Ontario Disability Support Program

If you have a disability preventing you from working, you may qualify for income support through the Ontario Disability Support Program. A referral is available through Ontario Works. Call for more information on the program and how to apply.

Spousal and Child Support

If you separated from your husband/wife or common law spouse, you may be entitled to financial support for yourself (if they supported you in full or in part during the relationship) as well as support for your children. Your lawyer would apply to the court on your behalf and any decisions about support and the amount of the payments would be part of the court order (see page 33).

Family Responsibility Office

Once an order for support is issued by the court, it is filed with the Family Responsibility Office (FRO), which processes the payments to help make sure they are paid on a regular basis. The FRO would collect the money from your spouse or partner — or from their employer — and then forward the money to you. The FRO will take various measures to collect any payments that are missed.

In order to provide the information the FRO needs to collect and forward the payments, you must fill out the forms that you receive in the “Filing Package” and send them back. You must also make sure to report any changes to this information (e.g. your partner’s address, employer or banking information; your address or banking information). Contact the FRO for more information.

Child and Family Benefits

The Ontario Child Benefit (OCB) consolidates several provincial child benefits into one benefit that is provided to low and moderate-income families with children under 18 years old. The OCB might include the Child Disability Benefit for those eligible.

If you have been receiving this benefit, make sure you report any address or banking changes to the appropriate administrative offices so that you continue to receive the funds.

If you have not received this benefit previously, but think you may be entitled, call the appropriate office to enquire or visit www.cra-arc.gc.ca.

Tax Credits

Revenue Canada issues a Goods and Services Tax/ Harmonized Sales Tax (GST/HST) Credit to individuals and families with incomes below a certain level. If you are eligible, a cheque will be sent to you four times a year. The amount of the credit will depend on your income and the number of people in your household.

You may also be entitled to other tax credits, such as Ontario Property or Sales Tax Credits. These would serve to either reduce the amount of taxes you have to pay, or provide you with a refund cheque.

To receive any of the above credits or the child and family benefits, you must file an income tax return, even if you were not employed during the year. If you do not receive an income tax package in the mail, you can pick one up at any post office. There are services that will complete your return for you (for a fee) or you can do it yourself; help is available through free tax clinics and telephone support lines (watch the newspaper for details).

Employment Insurance

If you have been working and have lost your job, or if you had to stop working because you were pregnant or stayed home to care for your new baby, you may be eligible for Employment Insurance (EI) benefits. Employment Insurance provides you with a temporary income while you are looking for another job or until you can return to work.

For more information contact Employment and Social Development Canada (ESDC) at 1-800-206-7218.

To receive benefits, file your claim as soon as possible after your last day of work. You can go to the nearest ESDC office to apply. You need to bring your S.I.N. card and your Record of Employment (which you will get from your employer). Your application will be reviewed and you will have a chance to ask questions about your benefits.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board

If you have suffered injuries and incurred expenses as a result of a crime of violence (including domestic violence), you may be eligible for compensation through the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board (CICB). You do not have to have laid charges against your partner. You can apply for compensation up to two years after the incident (time extensions are possible, but they are not always granted).

To get an application, call or write to the CICB. After you have applied, proving a claim can be an involved process and will include a hearing. You may want help from a lawyer. The maximum amount of compensation is $25,000 but most applicants receive much less.

Money Matters

When resources are scarce, it can be stressful and you may be tempted to go back to your partner, even though you know that the abuse will begin again. Don't be tempted to return for the wrong reasons. Your financial situation can improve and you can learn how to acquire and manage the money you need for yourself and your children. In the meantime, consider the following tips...

- Avoid incurring any additional debt. It may be tempting to rely on credit cards or financing programs in order to get the things you want, but be careful. High interest rates and financing charges can have you paying a lot more than you thought for those great “sale” items.
- Get some help. There are plenty of books, articles, and workshops on managing your finances. You can also get credit counselling to help you get out from under your debts (see page 53).

- Create a household budget. Know how much money you have coming in and what regular expenses you have to cover each month. Decide what you can afford to spend on food, clothing, entertainment and other expenditures. Use the form on page 121 to create a personalized household budget.
- Learn ways to cut back and save on purchases and expenses. (See the next section for suggestions on where to go to get clothing, household goods and other items for little or no money.)
- As difficult as it may be, try to save some money (even just a few dollars on a regular basis) that you can use for an unexpected expense or a special treat.

Mental Health Crisis Counselor Mon - Fri. 10:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.

Must be a registered patient of the Family Health Organization.

Your family doctor can give you advice and support and keep track of your medical history — and that of your children. If you cannot get in to see your family doctor (e.g. on weekends), or you do not have a doctor, you can go to a walk-in clinic. You do not need an appointment; patients are treated on a first-come, first served basis.

Make sure you bring your health card (or your child's card if that is who needs treatment).

Health Information Lines

Health Information Line 519-753-4937 ext. 259

Public health nurses at the Brant County Health Unit are available during business hours to answer health/medical questions and direct callers to community resources as needed.

Integrated Mental Health Crisis Service 519-759-7188 1-866-811-7188

24-hour crisis line; operated by St. Leonard's Community Services and works in partnership with Woodview Children's Mental Health and Autism Services, the Brant Community Health Care System, and the Alzheimer Society of Brant.

Poison Information Centre 1-800-268-9017

Telehealth Ontario 1-866-797-0000 TTY : 1-866-797-0007

Free, confidential health information available by phone, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. A registered nurse will answer your questions, assess your symptoms and advise if you should go to the doctor, clinic, or hospital. You do not need your OHIP number.

Choosing a Doctor, Dentist or Specialist

A family doctor who you trust and can confide in can play a significant role in helping you — and your children — stay safe and healthy. Ask people whose opinion you trust to recommend a doctor, dentist, or other healthcare professional. You will have to call to find out if the doctor is taking new patients.

Fee for Service/OHIP Coverage

Although there may be some medical services or procedures that require a separate fee, most doctors' fees are covered by the Ontario Health Insurance Plan (OHIP). You should have a separate health card for yourself and for each of your children. You will be required to show these cards every time you access any health service (i.e. hospital, clinic, doctor, specialist).

If you are on social assistance through Ontario Works (see page 48), you will also receive a drug card which will cover the cost of prescription medicine for yourself and your children. Most dental services, however, are not covered by OHIP. If you have a dental plan, or are covered under your spouse's or someone else's plan, some or all of the fees may be covered. Otherwise, you will have to pay for service. Call around to compare fees.

First Nation and Inuit Health Branch, please see page 100.

Financial Aid for Children's Dental Services

If your child requires dental work and you cannot afford the fees, you may be able to get financial assistance through the Brant County Health Unit's CINOT (Children In Need Of Treatment) program. Call 519 753-4937 ext. 450 for more information.

Brant County Health Unit

The Brant County Health Unit offers a range of programs and services directed at health education, disease prevention, nutrition, healthy growth and development of children, healthy lifestyles, sexual health and more. The Resource Centre is open to the public during business hours. Fact sheets and pamphlets are available on a wide range of topics including food and nutrition, fitness, women's health, birth control and parenting. Services are confidential and most programs are free of charge.

Specially trained volunteer crisis intervenors are on call 24 hours a day, seven days a week, to help people victimized by a criminal act or other traumatic event. These volunteers help lessen the distress of being victimized by providing understanding, support, accompaniment (to hospital, police station, shelter, etc.), practical assistance in providing for the victim's immediate needs and referrals to other resources. (After business hours, call Victim Services at 519-756-7050, see page 114 for further details.)

Child / Parent Resources

Parenting — a job that can be difficult in the best of times — is especially stressful and exhausting for women who are in, or who are leaving, an abusive relationship. In addition to coping with a range of emotions (fear, anxiety, guilt, shame, etc.), these moms need to protect, nurture, and reassure children who are themselves overwhelmed by anxieties and the changes in their lives. The following organizations can provide help, advice, and/or relief. (For medical/health and counselling services, see the preceding sections.)

Kids Can Fly

519-448-1713

Kids Can Fly is a registered charity that supports early learning and parenting. We base what we do on the research of the late Dr. Fraser Mustard who discovered that the first six years of life set the stage for lifelong learning, health and well-being. We also believe that parents are a child's first and most important teachers and therefore we strive to help provide nurturing and learning for parents so they can do the very best job possible.

Launch Pad: a free drop-in program for parents with children 0-5 years. Located at Graham Bell-Victoria School (56 Grand Street), it is open Tues. - Thurs. from 9:00 a.m. - noon. Parents

Training, Education and Employment

Before you embark on a job search or decide to change careers, take some time to think about your interests, strengths, skills, and your short and long term goals.

This may a good time to make changes that will ensure a brighter future and security for yourself and your children.

Information about courses and programs at colleges, universities and training institutions may be available at the library, through Internet websites, or by calling to request a course catalogue.

As you begin to put some of the crucial elements in place — housing, financial aid, and other basic needs — you may start thinking about other goals and ambitions: such as a job or career. Being able to earn your own money will not only let you enjoy a better standard of living, it will help boost your self-confidence and enable you to regain control of your own life.

If you have never worked outside the home, or if it has been some time since you did, you might want to improve your job skills or develop new ones. You may be interested in going back to school or enrolling in a training program. You might want to start by talking to someone who can advise you about career/job options.

The following agencies and community supports can help you get started in your search for a fulfilling and rewarding new position.

Matrimonial Property and the Indian Act

What is Matrimonial Property?

Matrimonial property is commonly defined as the family home that a married couple resides in, although legally the term covers all items of material value acquired during the marriage. Matrimonial property includes real property, which is immovable, such as a house or land, and personal property, which describes those items that can easily be moved and are not attached to the land, such as clothing, vehicles, income, and savings. Throughout the literature, matrimonial real property refers to the family home and land, and the matrimonial property regime refers to the laws or legislation regarding marital property.

What happens if a status band member divorces on reserve?

There is currently no applicable legislation or guidelines for the division of matrimonial property under the Indian Act or by virtue of case law. Each marriage or common-law relationship is treated individually on a case-by-case basis. The presumption that each partner receives 50% of the proceeds from the marriage (or matrimonial property) applies only off reserve to recognized family relationships. Of course, each spouse may negotiate an agreement with his or her former spouse privately. Note that each band or First Nation may have created their own matrimonial property guidelines or bylaws, and this must be researched in each unique case.

What happens if a status band member divorces off reserve?

If the spouses are unable to reach an agreement, the province or territory where the relationship ends will govern the distribution of matrimonial property. Generally speaking, the assumption is that each spouse should receive 50% of the proceeds of the relationship. Other factors governing the division of matrimonial property include whether each spouse is working, the duration of the relationship, any previous understandings or agreements, and the total assets and loans or debts. Sometimes custody of any children from the relationship may determine who resides in the family home. This is not an exhaustive list of all the factors that may be relevant for the distribution of matrimonial property. Anyone seeking a divorce should obtain legal advice.

What if a traditional marriage or Aboriginal customary marriage ends off reserve?

If a couple is unable to reach an agreement, they would have to apply to the courts to recognize the traditional marriage as being the equivalent of a legally recognized marriage and request the provincial or territorial legislation to apply to the relationship.

Does the Indian Act address divorces on reserve?

No. Most First Nations are still subject to the Indian Act on reserve land. There are no provisions in the Indian Act to deal with spousal property rights during a marriage or upon separation or divorce. This means that there is uncertainty and often no laws or guidelines for spouses upon separation or divorce while on reserve. The Indian Act falls under federal legislation, s. 91(24) of the Constitution Act, 1867 (“the Constitution”), and therefore there are no federal provisions relating to divorce, custody, or matrimonial property because under section 92(13) of the Constitution, family law was deemed the exclusive domain of the provincial and territorial governments. While every province and territory has family legislation that applies off reserve, there are almost no provisions on reserve land in the event of a divorce or separation. This gap in the matrimonial property regime has detrimentally affected Aboriginal communities.

Financial Assistance

Ontario Works

Social assistance is provided through Ontario Works. To apply, call the local intake department at 519-759-7009. You will need to provide: personal information including your full name, date of birth, Social Insurance Number, health card number, etc.; personal information for each of your children; the address of where you will be living; the amount you will be paying in rent; any income you will be receiving.

You will be given the date, time and location of an appointment with a case manager. (If you are in Brantford or Brant County, you will most likely be asked to report to the Brantford office at 220 Colborne Street.)

You will also receive a drug card, which will cover the cost of some prescription medicine. Note that you cannot apply to Ontario Works until you know where you will be living.

Brant-Brantford Homelessness Prevention Assistance

BBHPA was developed to help prevent homelessness. It assists with: last month's rent deposit; rent arrears; and heat, hydro, and water arrears. If you are in need of assistance, please contact your Ontario Works case manager, ODSP case worker, or the Housing Resource Centre.

Assistance With Child Care Costs

Child Care Services' Fee Subsidy Program provides financial assistance towards the cost of child care in licensed programs. You might be eligible if you are working, going to school or attending an approved training program. Both full and partial child care subsidies are issued. Call to find out if you qualify for the subsidy and how to proceed.

Ontario Disability Support Program

If you have a disability preventing you from working, you may qualify for income support through the Ontario Disability Support Program. A referral is available through Ontario Works. Call for more information on the program and how to apply.

Spousal and Child Support

If you separated from your husband or common law spouse, you may be entitled to financial support for yourself (if he supported you in full or in part during the relationship) as well as support for your children. Your lawyer would apply to the court on your behalf and any decisions about support and the amount of the payments would be part of the court order.

Family Responsibility Office

Once an order for support is issued by the court, it is filed with the Family Responsibility Office (FRO), which processes the payments to help make sure they are paid on a regular basis. The FRO would collect the money from your husband or partner — or from his employer — and then forward the money to you. The FRO will take various measures to collect any payments that are missed. In order to provide the information the FRO needs to collect and forward the payments, you must fill out the forms that you receive in the “Filing Package” and send them back. You must also make sure to report any changes to this information (e.g. your partner's address, employer or banking information; your address or banking information).

First Nations and Inuit Health Branch

Health Canada provides eligible First Nations people and Inuit with a specified range of medically necessary health-related goods and services when they are not covered through private insurance plans or provincial/territorial health and social programs.

Non-Insured Health Benefits (NIHB) include: prescription drugs, over-the-counter medication, medical supplies and equipment, short-term crisis counselling, dental care, vision care, and medical transportation.

A benefit will be considered for coverage when:

- The item or service is on a NIHB Program benefit list or NIHB schedule;
- It is intended for use in a home or other ambulatory care settings;
- Prior approval or predetermination is obtained (if required);
- It is not available through any other federal, provincial, territorial, or private health or social program;
- The item is prescribed by a physician, dental care provider, or other health professional licensed to prescribe; and the item is provided by a recognized provider.
- An eligible recipient is someone who is entitled to receive benefits such as vision care, prescription drugs or other benefits or services from the NIHB Program.

An eligible recipient must be identified as a resident of Canada and one of the following:

- A registered Indian according to the Indian Act;

- An Inuk recognized by one of the Inuit Land Claim organizations; or
- An infant less than one year of age, whose parent is an eligible recipient.

When recipients are eligible for benefits under a private health care plan, or public health or social program, claims must be submitted to these plans and programs first before submitting them to the Non-Insured Health Benefits Program.

Counselling, Support Services and Groups

Brantford Native Housing Community Counselling Program
Contact: Social Worker - 519-753-5408

The Community Counselling program is designed to provide short-term counselling support for individual identified issues and/or addiction counselling.

Evidence based practice is incorporated into all models of counselling used. Counselling is conducted mainly from a cognitive behavioural approach and includes some dialectical behaviour therapy models.

Cognitive therapy seeks to help the patient overcome difficulties by identifying and changing dysfunctional thinking, behaviour, and emotional responses. This involves helping clients develop skills for modifying beliefs, identifying distorted thinking, relating to others in different ways, and changing behaviours. Treatment is based on collaboration between client and therapist and on testing beliefs. Therapy may consist of testing the assumptions which one makes and identifying how certain of one's usually unquestioned thoughts are distorted, unrealistic and unhelpful. Once those thoughts have been challenged, one's feelings about the subject matter of those thoughts are more easily subject to change.

Dialectical behaviour therapy (DBT) is a system of therapy that combines standard cognitive-behavioural techniques for emotion regulation and reality-testing with concepts of distress tolerance, acceptance, and mindful awareness largely derived from Buddhist meditative practice. Research indicates that DBT is also effective in treating clients who present varied symptoms and behaviours associated with spectrum mood disorders, including self-injury. Recent work suggests its effectiveness with sexual abuse survivors and chemical dependency.

Financial Assistance for Recreation Programs

Through the “Can We Help” program, low-income families can get subsidies to assist with the costs of children and youth programs offered by the City of Brantford and the County of Brant. The amount of the subsidy is based on your income. Call 519-756-1500 (Brantford) or 519-442-1818 (Brant County) for more information.

Outdoor Fun

Your nearest park or playground can provide hours of free, healthy and enjoyable activity. Some parks (such as Mohawk Park) offer free arts and crafts and other organized activities for children during the summer. In the winter, many community parks have outdoor skating rinks, maintained by volunteers. The Apps Mill Nature Centre on Robinson Road has hiking trails and an interpretative centre which is open to the public on the weekends.

Sports, Clubs and Social Groups

Activities and programs in the community for you and your children include:

- Organized sports of all types and for all ages/skill levels
- Recreational skating
- Public swimming
- Fitness/exercise classes and programs
- Music, dance, and other creative arts
- Groups and clubs catering to a wide range of interests

Check the Brantford & Brant County Community Guide, or the local telephone directory for more information.

Public Libraries

Libraries provide a wealth of information, resources and programs/activities, virtually all free of charge. You and your children can borrow books, magazines, videos, CDs and books on tape. You can browse through local newspapers, look through college and university course catalogues, use resource material for research or job hunting, and log on to computers with Internet access. There are also computers for children (preloaded with games and educational

Epilogue - Living Your Life

Change can be difficult for people, even if it is necessary and for the best. Once you leave an abusive relationship you might have mixed emotions. You may feel a great sense of relief, empowerment and excitement about beginning a new life.

You may, however, also feel angry, depressed or sad over the loss of your relationship and your former life. This is normal, even if the relationship was a destructive one. It may take you some time to work through these feelings — counselling and the support of trusted friends and family can help.

If you are on your own after being with your partner for some time, you will need to adjust to new responsibilities and routines. It is not unusual to feel overwhelmed. Your children may initially be resentful and rebellious. They might blame you for the changes in their lives. Remember that they have also been through a lot. Be firm, but loving and kind. They need you to show them that there are ways to communicate and discipline without using violence.

Be kind to yourself too. You have accomplished a great deal and have a lot to be proud of. Take time to rest, relax and enjoy your new freedom.

When you need help, ask for it. There are answers to your questions and support to get you through difficult times. You do not have to feel alone.

You have proven that you possess the strength to deal with life's challenges and the wisdom to make decisions that will lead to a safer, happier life for yourself and your children.

We applaud your courage and wish you the very best.

Safety Planning

If you are in or leaving an abusive relationship, your safety is a priority. A safety plan is an individualized plan that focuses on ensuring survivors of domestic violence, sexual assault, dating violence, and stalking are safe. A safety plan is created based on the individual's needs and should be flexible and dynamic to reflect changing circumstances. Below are some tips on planning for your safety. To create a safety plan, please visit a local service provider for victims of domestic violence, many are listed throughout this handbook.

Safety at Home

- Have a safe location in the home with a locking door, accessible windows, and away from potential weapons in the event that the violence escalates.
- Practice an exit route to leave the home and have more than one route.
- Change locks to external doors and consider installing a security system.
- Install an outdoor lighting system that is motion sensitive.
- Notify neighbours of vehicle/physical descriptions of your abusive partner.
- Use a code word with family, neighbours, and friends to notify them conspicuously of danger.
- Be aware of joint bank accounts, credit cards, bills, etc. that can be accessed by abuser (consider having statements sent to a new address).
- Keep an emergency bag for yourself and your children at a separate location (see page 25-26 for a list of suggested items).

Safety at Work

- Notify your employer or a trusted co-worker of your partner's physical/vehicle description so if either are seen on the property, police can be notified.
- Have a co-worker walk with you to your car or bus stop.
- Review workplace violence legislation with your supervisor to keep informed about your rights as well as the responsibilities of the employer (i.e. Bill 168).
- Switch your schedule if possible, so that your arrival/departure will not follow the usual routine.

Safety in the Community

- Stay on roads that are well lit, have frequent traffic, and are closed to amenities.
- Alter your usual routine of places you would attend on a daily basis (e.g. consider changing grocery stores, banks, etc.).
- Have your cell phone charged and on your person at all times.

- If you feel you are being followed while driving, begin driving towards the police station and call dispatch.
- Keep lots of fuel in your vehicle, and enable a locking gas cap.
- Always meet an abusive partner in a public place, and notify your supports about the meeting.
- Notify your children's school about your situation and provide them copies of custody agreements, restraining orders, and bail conditions.

Safety Online/Technology

- Change passwords to online accounts (e.g. email, banking, social media).
- Consider changing your phone number and email address.
- Enable call blocking and call display on your phone.
- Keep a record of any emails, text messages, and voicemails left by the abuser.
- Have your computer and cell phone checked for GPS tracking apps and spyware.
- Do not post any identifying information on social media platforms.
- Avoid posting anything on social media when you are feeling sad or angry.
- Report any threatening behaviour to the support team of the website, so the individual can be blocked or removed from the site.
- Remember information posted on the internet can still be accessible even after you delete it.

Safety and Children

When safety planning with children, it is important to let them know that they are NOT responsible for the violence, and they can NOT stop it. It is also important to think about what your child is actually able to do. Below are some tips.

- Teach your child(ren) the exit routes you have prepared to leave the home; practice to ensure they know it in case of an emergency.
- Have your child(ren) identify one or more individuals that they trust and are comfortable with asking for help. This could be a neighbour, friends' parents, or other family members. Ensure your child knows their address and/or phone number.
- Teach your child(ren) a code word to signify that they need to go somewhere safe, ask for help, or call 911 (make sure your child knows their address and phone number to provide to the operator).
- Teach your children what they can do to stay safe: go to their room, leave the house and go somewhere safe (such as to the house of someone they trust), stay out of the way, when and how to dial 911, and to not intervene physically to stop the violence.
- Make sure children have access to important phone numbers.

Safety Apps

Personal use of smartphones and tablets is rapidly increasing. For survivors of domestic or sexual violence, or stalking, a mobile phone may be a critical component to their safety and safety planning. Given the prevalence of phones and tablets it is important to educate yourself on apps - software applications - that run on mobile devices. However, with so many apps available, how do we choose the right one for our safety needs? Below is a safety checklist to consider when downloading safety apps.

Safety Checklist

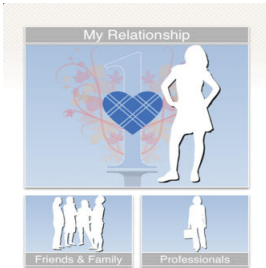

- Does the app allow for password protection so only the user can open the app and not just anyone with access to the phone?
- Does the app describe personal safety in the context of abuse perpetrated by an intimate partner?
- Does it provide warnings to the user about the possibility of the app being found by the abuser? Are these warnings provided before the app is downloaded or after the app is activated on a mobile device?
- Does the app have a privacy policy? This should either be in the app itself or on its website.
- If a privacy policy is unavailable, consider using another app, particularly if the app requests any personal identifying information from the user.
- Does the app require an email address or other contact information in order to use it? Does it ask for other types of personal information (such as the user's or the abuser's physical description)? Is there a disclaimer describing how the data is stored or used?
- Does the app require that the phone or tablet's location services be active in order for the app to work or be useful? Can you refuse the app's access to the device's location services?
- Does the app provide inaccurate information or recommend actions that go against suggested best practices when working with victims (such as suggesting the user inform the abuser that they are being reported)?

Checklist adapted from National Network to End Domestic Violence Incorporated. For more information, please visit www.nnedv.org/safetynet

Circle of 6

A personal safety app that allows you to connect with six individuals of your choice when you feel you are in an unsafe situation. The six will be notified via text message of your location, or you can choose to alert them by phone. You also have the option of being connected to a helpline.

One Love Lit - One Love Foundation

Based on the Danger Assessment, this app helps women to assess their level of risk in an intimate relationship.

YWCA Safety Siren

When the siren button is pressed in the app, or the mobile phone is shaken, the phone will call a pre-set contact and/or send an email indicating your location. The app also provides health and safety information.

Appendix - Household Budget Worksheet

The worksheet below will be helpful in creating a personal budget. You can tailor it to suit your own needs — don't forget to add in any of your own unique sources of income and/or expenses. If you are creating a monthly budget (as in the sample below), remember to make any necessary adjustments to the amounts (e.g. multiply a biweekly paycheque by two and divide any annual payments by 12). Knowing what you have to spend and organizing your finances will help you avoid getting into debt and assist you in gaining control of your life.

Total Remaining	= _____

This is what you have left. Consider putting some money into a savings account to cover unexpected expenses or to help meet your long-term goals. If your total expenses are greater than your total income, you will need to adjust your budget by cutting back on certain costs and/or finding a way to increase your income.
